

NEW JUDGE AFTER THE SALOONS SHALL REPUBLICANS EXPLAIN EXPENDITURES?

JUDGE LYMER STARTS A NEW DEAL IN LIQUOR CASES

DEFENDANT UP FOR DRUNKENNESS CALLED UPON TO TELL WHAT SALOONS VIOLATED LAW BY SELLING HIM LIQUORS, IN VIOLATION OF LAW, AFTER HIS PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS.

Komo, an Hawaiian, stood on his rights as a citizen in the police court this morning, and refused to supply certain information to the District Magistrate, as a result of which he was sent to jail for three months. The charge against Komo was drunkenness, and he admitted having been before the court on a similar charge about nine times.

"Where did you get the liquor," asked Judge Lymer.

"From the saloons," was the calm rejoinder. "Citizens have the right to purchase liquor," added Komo.

"Citizens who have been convicted as often as you, have not the right," said the judge. "Give me the names of the saloons."

Komo started to do so, but after mentioning the Pacific saloon, he stopped and reiterated his assertion that he could buy liquor where he pleased.

"Tell him," said the Judge to the interpreter, "that the punishment he will get will depend perhaps on the freedom with which he gives these names."

But Komo continued to assert that he was privileged to enter any saloons until he was cut short by Judge Lymer imposing sentence of three months' imprisonment.

WON'T TELL HOW POLITICAL MONEY WAS PAID OUT

The matter of publishing the campaign expenditures of the Republican party will, it is understood, be brought before the party committee, Chairman Atkinson, of the Territorial committee, who was in general charge of the territorial campaign and the local county campaign, said this morning that while he had not the slightest objection personally to the publication of all expenditures he did not consider that it was proper to publish the accounts.

"I shall lay the matter before the committee," said Atkinson. "I want to say that I have not the slightest objection to showing all our books of accounts, which were splendidly kept and are in perfect order, to anyone who is entitled to see them. But I do not approve the idea of showing them for publication."

Asked what reason there could be for not showing the voters of the community how the party had spent money in an election, Atkinson said that it was a matter of concealing methods of campaign management and strategy. "We have our own plans of work," he said, "and some of them are the result of years of study. We may have methods which are wholly unknown to the other side, and which would be exposed by a publication of our expenditures. I do not see why we should give our hands away. There is no other objection that I can think of to publication of the expenditure accounts."

The accounts, it is believed, will not be published, as there are said to be items which there is considerable interest in keeping secret. There is talk, however, of legislative action to place Hawaii in line with states where purity of elections has been made an issue, and where campaign committees are compelled to make known how they spend subscribed money.

AMERICAN SHOOTS INTO A MEXICAN MOB

(Associated Press Cable to The Star.)

CITY OF MEXICO, Mexico, November 12.—The rioting against Americans here today resulted in the shooting of two persons, one being killed, by an American, and the mob is consequently more excited than ever. Anti-American sentiment has grown and further serious outbreaks are being prepared for by a massing of troops.

Firing into a mob which was stoning his home in Guadalajara, Chas. Carothers, an American, killed a boy in the mob and wounded a watchman. Carothers has been arrested and is in jail, heavily guarded.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 12.—It is asserted by those who have been investigating the Texas lynching case, which caused the outbreaks against Americans in Mexico, that the man lynched was a native of New Mexico, U. S. A., and not of Mexico. The authorities of the United States and Mexico and the state of Texas are all investigating the affair.

President Porfirio Diaz of Mexico has ordered an investigation of the reported attack by Mexicans on the Mexican consulate at Ciudad

VOTING STRAIGHT TICKET CAUSED A FIGHT AND A FINE OF ONE DOLLAR

"I voted the straight Democratic ticket," said Joe Podesta this morning, "and Silva got mad with me. Most of us hackmen voted the Democratic ticket, but some of them voted the Republican. When I went to the telephone Silva rushed at me and I pushed him away. Then he picked up a stone and went to hit me with it. If he had thrown it at my head he would have smashed me up. He is a little fellow and it's no use hitting him, because he runs to the police station."

Thus Podesta described the origin of a row between himself and Manuel Silva. Both were hackmen on the Bethel street stand. The argument commenced on the day before election when Silva wanted to know how Podesta intended to vote. Podesta told him he was Democratic.

While talking a telephone rang (there are three telephones at the Bethel street stand) and as the owner of the phone was not present Podesta started to answer the call. Whilst holding the receiver to his ear, Silva told him to get out, at the same time, according to Podesta, and one of his witnesses, using an opprobrious epithet.

Then Podesta pushed Silva away; Silva says Podesta hit him on the mouth, and Silva seized a stone. Podesta grappled with Silva, telling him to drop the stone or he would make him eat it, and Silva, being a small man and not particularly hungry at the time, promptly dropped the stone. When Podesta released him Silva beat it to the police station and took out a warrant for Podesta's arrest.

The two parties told their story to Judge Lymer this morning. They agreed on nearly everything but the actual hitting. Podesta said he pushed Silva; Silva said Podesta hit him. The witnesses were also at variance on this point, but Sheriff Jarrett saw Silva after the row and Silva's mouth was slightly bleeding then.

A Korean bootblack, who works on the corner, said he didn't see anything but when pressed he said: "One time I see a hit; one time only; never see any more."

Judge Lymer imposed a fine of $1 on Podesta, much to the surprise and indignation of his friends who were present in court, one of whom advised Podesta not to pay but to appeal the case. Podesta thought better of the advice and paid up.

LANE CONTEST TALK AND POLICE COERCION

The question of whether a contest should be made of the vote in the sixth precinct of the Fourth district is being considered by several attorneys. Whether the violations of law in that precinct which were described yesterday in The Star, constitute a ground for throwing out the vote of the precinct is the question at issue. There appear to be many witnesses to the fact that the law was freely violated, in that several voters were allowed in each booth at once, also that voters were allowed to mark their ballots outside the booths altogether.

Whether violation of the law as to secrecy of the ballot constitutes grounds for throwing out the vote of the precinct, is what the lawyers are considering. If they decide that it does, there will be a legal contest, and if the vote of the precinct in question is thrown out by the courts, Lane will be mayor of Honolulu.

Chairman Atkinson of the Republican committee said this morning that he considered that the Democratic police department had used its power in a most reprehensible manner in many precincts. "There were police officers working for the Democrats, in many of the election booths," said Atkinson. "This, when you think of it, is a most atrocious political crime. The police officers were absolutely without right in the voting booths at all. The election officers, representing both parties, were supposed to be in charge of the booths. It was a most outrageous violation of right and propriety that police, all Democratic workers, were there."

Consequences of the examination if she were innocent. She would receive a full and impartial hearing, and her case would be decided in a perfectly fair way.

Shortly afterward, the District Attorney returned into court, and submitted a motion that the case against Domingo's parents be dismissed. This was accordingly granted, and the old couple left the court.

THE MAKURA COMES AND GOES

The Canadian-Australian steamer Makura, 8075 tons, arrived at 5.30 this morning from Vancouver, en route to Australia. The steamer left Vancouver at 6.30 p. m. on the 4th instant, and after a stay of three hours at Victoria, left again at 3.00 a. m. on the 5th. Strong south-west gales prevailed until the ninth, after which the wind moderated and continued so until port was reached.

The Makura did not reach the wharf until close upon half-past eight. She had 434 passengers on board, of whom sixty-six were for Honolulu. The through passengers included Earl and Countess Harrowby, Lady Francis Ryder, General Godley, of the New Zealand Forces, and the Hon. Hugh McKenzie, Minister for Lands in Australia.

The Makura had very little cargo for Honolulu, simply sixty-five packages of household effects.

She left for Fanning Island at one o'clock, to take the cargo brought up by the Zealandia. The Makura is due in Sydney on November 28.

SHOOTING MEN WILL BE TRIED

Volney C. Driver and Wm. M. McQuaid will have to face trial on charges of assault with intent to kill, as soon as they are in a fit condition to be moved from Queen's Hospital. Driver is now almost well and it is considered probable that McQuaid will also be sufficiently recovered within a very short space of time now. Both are still under arrest, and police court proceedings have simply been suspended awaiting the recovery of both men.

Chief Detective McDuffie repudiated the statement made yesterday that he had stated Driver's father was working to get the matter dropped and was bringing pressure to bear on the Sheriff's Department and on Chief McDuffie to this end. "What have I to do with the prosecution?" asked Chief McDuffie. "All I know about it is that Driver's father told me he wanted to bring about a reconciliation and get his son away."

McDuffie further added: "You can deny that I made any such statement."

Deputy Sheriff Rose was present at the time of conversation, and emphatically stated that the two men would be brought before the court, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. "What would we be thinking about?" he asked, "to drop a matter of this kind."

RETURNED TODAY.

Mrs. J. M. Atherton and daughter were returning passengers on the Makura this morning from a tour of Europe. They were met at the wharf by a large number of relatives and friends. Other returning passengers this morning were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Soper.
